

JPIA Cancels 2021 Training Conference in San Diego

September 9, 2021

Dear JPIA Members,

As we look at the current state of the pandemic and try to discern what is best for our employees and our members' employees, JPIA has made the difficult decision to postpone our Training Conference in San Diego. This was not a decision made lightly. Our hope that the pandemic would be settling down and allow us to gather freely in an environment conducive to learning and interacting has not come to fruition. We are optimistic that we will be able to reschedule in spring 2022.

It has been nothing short of challenging to plan an event during these times with COVID-19, especially with the Delta Variant increasingly threatening some California communities. We came to the realization that we could not adequately ensure the health and safety of our staff and valued members at this time. We know this is as disappointing for our participants as it is for us.

Please know that we are committed to continue providing online learning options and hope to support your professional development needs until we're able to safely host more collaborative, multi-agency events again in the future. We encourage your agency to reach out to your assigned JPIA Risk Advisor to discuss Health, Safety or Operations-focused training needs or to our JPIA Training department to learn more about the HR/Supervisory-related options we offer. You can learn more at <https://www.acwajpia.com/training-2/>.

For those who have registered and paid for the event, in the coming days you will receive a refund to your credit card or by check, according to the type of payment you submitted. If you made a room reservation, please be sure to cancel it as soon as possible along with any other travel arrangements.

We sincerely apologize for the inconvenience but thank you always for your understanding. We look forward to bringing this event to you in 2022. Please reach out if you have questions or concerns.
